

Selected Works for Solo Piano

Prelude on a Familiar Tune (2000)

Commissioned by Jackie-Edwards Henry, to be performed as a companion piece/response to the Prelude in C# Minor, Op. 45, by Chopin. The tune Londonderry Air is featured; motives from this well know English folk tune bear a resemblance to a theme that is developed in the Chopin prelude.

from Three Pieces for Piano (1995)

Commissioned by pianist Joel Harrison as a set. The commission called for a series of pieces for solo piano that used hymn tunes in some fashion. The pieces are not chorale preludes; the hymn tunes or hymn tune fragments are used as subtext, enhancing the meaning of the overall composition.

Variations on a Mode: The mode is Phrygian; the piece weaves together a set of variations on the pitches of this famous scale, as opposed to an initial theme. Fragments of the Third Mode tune by Thomas Tallis begin to accumulate; gradually, more and more of this hymn tune commands attention.

Nocturne: A quiet, delicate, Chopin esque movement, one that is inspired by Ar Hyd y Nos, a Welsh folksong that some people associate with the text All Through the Night. The tune is heard prominently in the A sections of the work, the first of which follows an atmospheric introduction. A contrasting B section has fragments of the tune, but also is a gentle reminder of the time of day. This piece also exists in a modified form in my Piano Trio, 2006. (see Instrumental Works)

Invention: The title says it all; a light-hearted, two-part invention for piano, modeled after J.S. Bach, but with the sensibilities of more contemporary composers such as Webern and Cage. Expect to hear silence as a compositional element, not to mention more extreme octave registers. German Lutheran hymn fragments abound, most notably Lord Keep Us Steadfast in Thy Word. A revised version of this piece was completed in 2012; a chamber version is featured in my Piano Trio, 2006. (See Chamber works)

Buxton Farm (1982)

Years ago, I participated in a fund-raiser for the Cincinnati Composers Forum. A member of the group devised a unique offer: for a total price of $32.95, anyone could commission a Cincinnati Composers Forum member to write a short piece as a gift for someone of the buyer's choice. The performance medium and level of difficulty was to be determined by the buyer as well.

There was a quick turn-around time for this product, as it was a fund-raising scheme for the holidays. I received my “commission” on a Monday, and had to have the piece composed, copies made and ready for a recording session by the following Saturday! My assignment: to write a piece for solo piano, in a down-home style that would bear the following title: Buxton Farm. Oh yes, they also wanted flash; something virtuosic.

With six days to create this little masterpiece, I knew that I had to rely on my own four years of college piano, yet make it sound like I had more experience than that. A simple ternary form developed, with various tunes quoted, à la Charles Ives. Expect to hear Old McDonald had a Farm, Turkey in the Straw, and whatnot. In case you are wondering: I did make the deadline, and the rest is history! The piece now exists in its original solo version, plus a second one for piano two-hands.

Works for Solo Accordion

Toccata and Polka in D Minor (2001)

The title alone should warn the listener sufficiently. A tribute to serious accordionists everywhere, especially those who first learned the classics by playing them on the accordion! The famous Bach Toccata and Fugue in D Minor is fodder for this concert piece, but if you listen carefully, there are strains of a certain well-known polka that will appear as well.
